

Finger Rock

Brother Branham had been praying concerning what to do with the questions he would have from the people after he preached a sermon on marriage and divorce. Something had said to him, "Go up yonder in the mountains, and I'll talk to you." It was early one cloudless morning in February 1965 when Brother Branham went up to the end of Alvernon Way, in Tucson, Arizona. He parked his car, and walked up the Finger Rock trail part of the way up the mountain. Right above him was the place called Finger Rock, which looks like an index finger pointing upward. (The photo at the upper left shows Finger Rock in the middle. The photo at the upper right is Finger Rock.)

While Brother Branham was praying on the mountain below Finger Rock, an umbrella-shaped, amber-colored cloud went up and down above the mountain for about forty-five minutes. It went up into the air and came back down like a funnel and went back up and spread out, and came back down again. This happened repeatedly. School children were let out of school to watch it

When Brother Branham returned from the mountain, he went to the Evans' Service Station on the corner of Prince and Park, just up the street from the duplex apartment that the Branhams were renting from Sister Larson. At the filling station, young Ronnie Evans asked, "Brother Branham, you was up in that mountain over yonder, wasn't you?" He replied, "What do you mean, Ronnie? No." (He didn't tell him directly so he could see what he was going to do.) Ronnie said, "I can show you right where you were at. I called mama, and we stood here and watched that Cloud hanging up in here, going up and down. I said, 'It's got to be Brother Branham setting up in there somewhere. That's God talking to him.'"

After this, Brother Branham returned to Jeffersonville to preach a series of meetings, which included a sermon on the morning of February 21, 1965, called "Marriage and Divorce," in which he also told this experience. Brother Green and others believe Brother Branham had the revelation of marriage and divorce for twenty years, but he had to get permission from God to grant the people who had messed their lives up, the right to stay as they were in forgiveness, but not to do it again. As with Moses, "it was not so from the beginning," but God showed mercy. It wasn't that God revealed marriage and divorce to him, it's just that on that day God gave that prophet permission to tell those who had their lives messed up to stay as they were, but don't do it again.

The finger on the top of Finger Rock is about two hundred feet tall. Brother Green took the photo on the right from an airplane, when it was flying upside down. "That's the only picture I'll ever take like that – you will never get me to do that again."

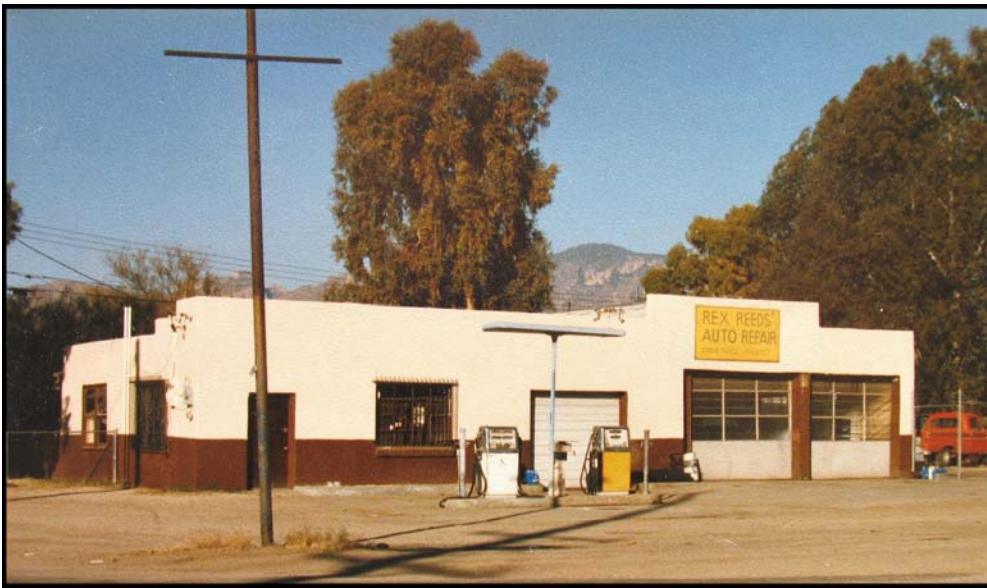

Evans' Service Station

When Brother Branham returned from Finger Rock, he stopped at the Evans' Service Station on the corner of Prince and Park, just up the street from the duplex apartment the Branhams were renting from Sister Larson.

The photo on the left is the building at the corner of Prince and Park where Brother Branham stopped, but when this photo was taken it was no longer the Evans' Service Station. This photo shows more of the service station look than it has now. The current owners run a car repair business in the building.

The mountains behind the service station are the Catalina Mountains, where Finger Rock and Sabino Canyon are located.

Note: This work may be used and distributed only if it is copied entirely, it is not modified, and it is distributed free of charge.
Tucson Tabernacle, 2555 N Stone Ave, Tucson, Arizona 85705 USA